

Jim Collins, Ph.D.

Jim Collins, Ph.D. provides a wide variety of continuing education courses and professional development to thousands of health care professionals monthly. He has spent 15 years as a college instructor and has taught sociology, gerontology and psychology courses. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in Gerontological Studies, a Master's Degree in Sociology, a Graduate Certificate in Life Span Development and Gerontology, and a Ph.D. in Health Administration.

He has provided over 20 years of service to the health care industry and has specialized in various areas including geropsychiatry, psychotherapy, professional development, employee retention and person-centered care training.

Along with his passion for public speaking, Jim loves to write for numerous health care publications and magazines and has written the first book on person-centered care in nursing homes: The Person-Centered Way: Revolutionizing Quality of Life in Long-Term Care.

He now provides an exciting new way to obtain online CEUs and mandatory or compliance training for health care professionals using an innovative TV-style presentation at www.collinslearning.com.

Collins Learning delivers an exciting new alternative to traditional inservice training and continuing education. Our online service provides necessary CEUs for licensed healthcare professionals and compliance training for all healthcare employees. The programs are produced in two dynamic formats: lively talk show and stimulating documentary. You will benefit from receiving engaging and informative health care information, fulfill your compliance training requirements and receive CEUs at the same time.
