Meet Dr. Jim Collins

Jim Collins, PhD provides continuing education courses in person and online and continues to present to thousands of healthcare professionals. He has 22 years of experience in senior care, geropsychiatry, business development, census development, professional development, employee retention, continuing education, compliance training, resident-centered care and motivational speaking. He spent 15 years in college classrooms teaching courses in gerontology, sociology, psychology and anthropology.

Jim holds a Bachelor’s Degree in Gerontological Studies, a Master’s Degree in Sociology, a Graduate Certificate in Life Span Development and Gerontology, and a PhD in Health Administration.

He has authored the first full-length book in the United States that addresses resident-centered care in nursing homes, entitled The Person-Centered Way: Revolutionizing Quality of Life in Long Term Care. Jim writes for healthcare and senior care publications and maintains a jam-packed schedule of public and private presentations in long-term care facilities, assisted living, hospitals, senior centers and other health care venues. He holds large scale seminars regularly.

Collins Learning Online is Jim’s latest venture and provides compliance training and continuing education courses, tracking and reports for senior care businesses around the country. Visit our website to find out more.
